Tchitcherin Urges Ismet to Stand Firm Against Efforts to Internationalize Waterway

By JOHN HADLEY.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 3 .- The Near East peace conference will reach its most critical stage tomorrow when it takes up the settlement of the Turkish straits-Dardanelles, Bosperus and Sea of Marmorathe most important waterway from a strategic military and political standpoint touching European soil. TURKS UNDECIDED.

The Soviet Russian delegation headed by George Tchtcherin, peo-ple's commissar for foreign af-fairs in the Moscow government, will participate directly in the con-ference for the first time when the Turkish Strait commission meets. Russian representatives will be ap-

Russian representatives will be appointed to this commission.

Tchitcherin conferred with Ismet Pasha, leader of the Turkish delegation all day long, presenting the Russian viewpoint and attempting to stiffen the Turkish attitude on the Russian Strait. The Russian envoy brought all his persuasive powers to bear upon the Turkish chief in an effort to have him stand firm for the demand that the Dardanelles shall be barred in the future to warships barred in the future to warships of all nations except Turkey.
Before the arrival of the Russians, Ismet had discussed the Dardanelles question with British French and Italians and he pointed out that he was unable to give a decisive answer to the Russian requests until all this data had been placed before the Turkish ationalist Assembly at Angora. Two additional Turkish delegate were scheduled to arrive tonight, bearing fresh instructions from Argora for Ismet.

DEADLOCK ON ISSUES. Tchitcherin said that the Russians did not covet the Turkish strait. He declared that Russia was "more interested in seeing that was "more interested in seeing that the Turks got justice than anything else."

"Soviet Russia holds the view that the Turks should be allowed to build as many fortifications as they wish along the Dardanelles so long as they allow free passage of inerchant ships of all nations," said Tchitcherin.

When the conference enters its third week tomorrow it will find an unbroken deadlock on all questions. The greatest resentment yet displayed by the Turks was shown over the allied proposals that the capitulations be maintained at Constantinople under the new treaty.
